
Essays in Economic & Business History

Volume XXXV, 2017(1)

This special issue of Essays in Economic and Business History is a festschrift to Christer Lundh, professor in Economic History at the University of Gothenburg, Sweden.

The original research articles printed herein, written by Christer Lundh's friends, colleagues, and former students, expand upon his work and represent the current research frontier of the field. The contents of this festschrift generally pertain to historical demography and labor market research, although other topics are also addressed in this extensive volume.

These articles illustrate the strength of social science history as a discipline and also demonstrate the vast potential of historical research to contribute to answering societal questions in the present day.

<http://ebhsoc.org/>